Reliving a Bygone Age

Situated 5 miles north of Northampton, just off the A508 or A5199, the Northampton & Lamport Railway offers a great day out for families and railway enthusiasts alike.

Apart from our many special events, you can ride on a train hauled by one of our steam or heritage diesel locomotives every Sunday from 4th March until the end of October.

Our present motive power includes a number of working steam and diesel locomotives, some of which carry the 2E shed plate in honour of Northampton's steam depot which closed in 1965. Further locomotives and rolling stock can be seen in various stages of restoration.

History Of The Line

The Northampton to Market Harborough branch was designed by George R Stephenson and was opened in 1859. It had six stations and two tunnels (Kelmarsh 518 yards and Oxendon 462 yards) along its 18 mile length.

The Branch carried goods and passenger traffic throughout most of its commercial life, but had an erratic period during the 1960's and 1970's when passenger traffic stopped and started a number of times. On 16th of August 1981, after 123 years of service, the line was finally closed by British Railways.

Three years later the Northampton & Lamport Railway's volunteers started to rebuild the railway on the old goods yard at Pitsford and Brampton station. The first passengers were carried along the reopened section in November 1995. The line was officially opened on 31st March 1996.

After seven years of hard work and fund-raising by our volunteers and at a cost £50,000, 2002 saw the first passenger train to cross the restored bridge 13 since the line's closure. Since then track has been laid on the southern extension and Boughton signal box has been built.

A platform and run around loop will be constructed at Boughton and we will require another £40,000 for the restoration of bridge 11!
